WELCOME HOME, SOPHIE!

It's a happy homecoming for a daughter of Temple!

Sophie Samuels has joined the staff of Temple Israel as Director of Educational Outreach.

She began in this new full-time position, which is under the Education Department headed by Barb Gelb, in July.

"Temple is truly very fortunate to have Sophie on staff," said Barb. "She is bright and energetic and brings a tremendous work ethic and positive 'can-do' attitude with her. Sophie and I talked about this four years ago when she graduated high school, and it gives me great happiness to see her pursuing a career in Jewish education and communal service. We look forward to having Sophie make many meaningful contributions to Temple for years to come."

"A partial list of some of the things she'll be doing here includes working with families with elementary age children, holiday programming, developing mitzvah projects for our b'nai mitzvah students and families, and the 8th grade and High School programs," said Barb.

Sophie graduated from Vanderbilt University in May, majoring in Child Studies and double minoring in Jewish Studies and Studio Art.

"To say I'm excited and honored to be selected for this job is an understatement," said Sophie. "I wholeheartedly look forward to serving the Temple family to the very best of my abilities. And, while I grew up at Temple Israel and therefore know many Temple members, I also look forward to meeting more members of our amazing congregation."

Sophie is the daughter of Harry and Laurie Samuels.
